Essentials of Correctional Nursing Lorry Schoenly, PhD, RN, CCHP-RN 2012-08-14 "Essentials of Correctional Nursing is the first new and comprehensive text about this growing field to be published in the last decade. Fortunately, the editors have done a great job in all respects...This book should be required reading for all medical practitioners and administrators working in jails or prisons. It certainly belongs on the shelf of every nurse, physician, ancillary healthcare professional and corrections administrator."--Corhealth (The Newsletter of the American Correctional Health Services Association) "I highly recommend Essentials of Correctional Nursing, by Lorry Schoenly, PhD, RN, CCHP-RN and Catherine M. Knox, MN, RN, CCHP-RN, editors. This long-awaited book, dedicated to the professional specialty of correctional nursing, is not just a good read, it is one of those books that stays on your desk and may never make it to the bookshelf."--American Jails "Correctional nursing has minimal published texts to support, educate, and provide ongoing best practices in this specialty. Schoenly and Knox have successfully met those needs with Essentials of Correctional Nursing."--Journal of Correctional Health Care Nurses have been described as the backbone of correctional health care. Yet the complex challenges of caring for this disenfranchised population are many. Ethical dilemmas around issues of patient privacy and self-determination abound, and the ability to adhere to the central tenet of nursing, the concept of caring, is often compromised. Essentials of Correctional

Nursing supports correctional nurses by providing a comprehensive body of current, evidence-based knowledge about the best practices to deliver optimal nursing care to this population. It describes how nurses can apply their knowledge and skills to assess the full range of health conditions presented by incarcerated individuals and determine the urgency and priority of requisite care. The book describes the unique health needs and corresponding care for juveniles, women, and individuals at the end of life. Chapters are devoted to nursing care for patients with chronic disease, infectious disease, mental illness, or pain, or who are in withdrawal from drugs or alcohol. Chapters addressing health screening, medical emergencies, sick call, and dental care describe how nurses identify, respond to, and manage these health care concerns in the correctional setting. The Essentials of Correctional Nursing was written and reviewed by experienced correctional nurses with thousands of hours of experience. American Nurses Association standards are woven throughout the text, which provide the information needed by nurses studying for certification exams in correctional nursing. The text will also be of value to nurses working in such settings as emergency departments, specialty clinics, hospitals, psychiatric treatment units, community health clinics, substance abuse treatment programs, and long-term care settings, where they may encounter patients who are currently or have previously been incarcerated. Key Features: Addresses legal and ethical issues surrounding correctional nursing Covers common inmate-patient health care concerns and diseases Discusses the unique health needs of juveniles, women, and individuals at the end of life Describes how nurses can safely navigate the correctional environment to create a therapeutic alliance with patients Provides information about health screening, medical emergencies, sick call, and dental care Serves as a core resource in the preparation for correctional nursing certification exams

Gerodontology Essentials for Health Care Professionals Anastassia Kossioni 2020-06-02 This book provides basic knowledge and skills for non-dental healthcare practitioners, helping them recognize the importance of oral health, perform initial oral health assessments, consult dentists when necessary, and offer preventive advice and counseling. As people age, they tend to refrain from routine dental care, while the number of consultations with non-dental healthcare providers (physicians, nurses, pharmacists, physician assistants, physical therapists, occupational therapists etc.) increases. However, few healthcare providers are adequately trained to assess oral problems. The relevance of this book is underscored by the recently published European policy recommendations on oral health in older adults by the European College of Gerodontology and the European Geriatric Medicine Society, which highlight the importance of the active involvement of non-dental primary care practitioners in oral health assessment and promotion. These two respected European Societies have identified a significant gap in education, practice and health policies and described the necessary action plans. This book helps to fill the educational gap identified in the recommendations and will be an invaluable tool for all healthcare providers working with older people.

Assessment of Oral Care Compliance Charting After Educational In-service Intervention and Implementation of Oral Assessment Guide Kylee Rae Maliwauki 2021

Background: In a macrocosmic view dental care in most countries is expansive, and the prevalence of dental caries and oral cancer is elevated throughout the world.

Periodontal disease is one of the most common oral ailments. In a microcosmic view, oral health comorbidities are increased in individuals older than 18 years in the United States and include periodontal disease and decaying of the teeth. Fortunately, the edentulous patient is decreasing in America. On a community level hospital-acquired pneumonia (HAP) affects approximately 200,000 people per year and is the most common hospital-acquired infection. Recently on Utah Valley Hospital's 9th floor, oral care has been provided to patients only 10.24% of the time, putting patient at risk of HAP, malnutrition, and joint replacement/heart valve replacement infections, as well as other comorbidities such as diabetes and periodontal disease. Framework: The frameworks utilized in this study include Kurt Lewin's Change Theory and Iowa evidence-based practice model. They guided the implementation of the realization for needed change, assisted in asking a question, and helped to employ strategies to initiate a culture of change on the specific hospital unit. Methods: This project's objective was to implement an oral care intervention, with nursing staff, to determine if an increase in oral care compliance for patients could be assessed. An educational in-service was provided at which the nursing staff were educated by the project manager and a dental hygienist to assess oral care in the patient's oral cavity. The nursing staff were given a survey to assess barriers to oral care. The Oral Health Assessment Tool was given to nursing staff to assist in assessing the patient's mouth, create oral care goals for the patient throughout the day, and chart when oral care was completed. They utilized this tool for two weeks after the initiation of the in-service. After which a post-project questionnaire was utilized to assess nursing staff opinion of what was beneficial/hindering in this project. Utilization of patient chart audits was utilized two weeks prior to and two weeks after the in-service to assess if the intervention showed an increase in oral care compliance. Findings/Results: No significant difference was assessed between the two independent variable groups. With an alpha value of 0.05,  $U=11855.5$ ,  $z=-1.54$ , and  $p=.12$  it has been found that there was no significant difference between the independent groups and their outcome variable. With this information, the null hypothesis cannot be rejected. Conclusion/Patient Outcome: Oral care compliance charting did not increase after educational in-service and implementation of an oral assessment tool. The main barriers to oral care assessed were lack of time, high workload and low priority. Benefits of this project assessed from nursing staff included implementation of an oral health assessment tool and an educational in-service describing oral care necessities. Limitations included COVID-19 patient admissions, nursing burnout, and nursing workload. Going forward, the inclusion of patient care technicians may be necessary to assess and increase in charting compliance.

Oral Health and Aging Christie-Michele Hogue 2022
This book provides a comprehensive review of the assessment and management of older peoples oral health care needs. Discussing recent initiatives to emphasize oral health promotion and prevention, the book describes improvements in pharmacological and non-pharmacological approaches for special populations in geriatrics and illuminates the role of barriers to oral health care for older people. Divided into three sections, the book first explores aging and oral health, including age-related changes, epidemiology, nutrition, dysphagia, aspiration pneumonia, xerostomia and hyposalivation, management of periodontal disease and caries, systemic diseases that influence oral health, and considerations for chronic orofacial pain. The second section illuminates the ways in which frailty and other geriatric syndromes influence oral health care in older adults with a special focus on frailty, dementia, delirium and depression, and the delivery of oral health care to vulnerable geriatric populations in long-term care, home care, palliative care, and hospice. Lastly, the book addresses inequalities in the oral health of older minority populations, the disproportionate burden of oral disease and tooth loss, the contribution of these issues to further complications in comorbidities, the association of extended health literacy and periodontal disease, and the social and cultural conditions that might be altered or improved by healthcare programs and health policies. Oral Health and Aging is a useful book written by an international group of experts and designed to educate geriatricians, primary care physicians, nurses, dentists, dental hygienists, speech and language pathologists, dietitians, and health policy advocates.

Oral Health Promotion Lone Schou 1993-06-24

Many of the common dental diseases are behavioural in origin, and are affected by individual lifestyles. Health promotion is therefore at the heart of preventing and controlling dental ill health. This is the first book to tackle this important new area of dentistry and presents theoretical and practical advice on a broad range of topics; including models and theories of health behaviour, influence of social factors on oral health promotion, government health policies, health education in specific settings, national campaigns, and evaluation of interventions. Here, the international contributors provide a broad overview of the subject which enables the reader to target sections of particular interest. Practical guidelines for the planning and implementation of oral health programmes presented will be invaluable for practitioners.
